SNAPSHOT REPORT

ABILITY TO DEAL WITH REJECTION 73

You generally don't concern yourself too much about being rejected by others, although it does cross your mind from time to time. However, you don't really seem to be the type to bend over backwards in order to get and keep other people's approval - at least not too often. Rejection by the people in your life may very well hurt you and may be something you have experienced before, but you try not to let it affect how you feel about yourself. Although you likely know this, the only approval you should be worried about is your own. Moreover, when you respect and approve of yourself, you are more likely to project an image to others that says "I am worthy, and I am have much to offer to someone."

WANT TO LEARN MORE?

Would you like to learn more about yourself and your self-esteem? Self-esteem is more than just an overall number; it stems from many personality traits, habits and attitudes. For example, you scored 79 on the Sense of Self-Efficacy scale. Find out what this means and how you did in the other sections right away, simply by ordering your full test report.
